

INTERVIEWS • JOB SEARCH

Interview went well. Then... silence.

The follow-up that lands as keen — not desperate. When,
and exactly what to send 📌

To: hr@company.com

Subject: Following up — [Role]

Swipe for the email →

WHEN + HOW

Timing is most of it.

Wait ~5–7 working days after the last step

One short email — not five

Reply on the same thread if there is one

Too soon reads as anxious. Too many reads as pushy.
Once, after a week.

THE EMAIL

Warm, brief, no guilt-trip.

To: [interviewer]

Subject: Following up — [Role]

“Hi [name], thanks again for [day]’s chat about [role].
Still very interested — happy to share anything else that helps. Look forward to hearing from you.”

 No ‘why haven’t you replied’. Just warmth + a door left open.

DO / DON'T

Stay warm. Keep moving.

✗ Emailing daily, or 'why no reply??'

✓ One polite nudge, then let it rest.

✗ Vanishing / putting all hope on one role.

✓ Keep applying elsewhere while you wait.

 Silence isn't always a no — budgets, approvals and holidays all cause delays.

SEND IT, THEN MOVE ON

One email. Then keep going.

- 1 Wait 5–7 working days
- 2 One short, warm email
- 3 Same thread if there is one
- 4 No guilt, no pressure
- 5 Keep applying meanwhile

Waiting on one? Line up three more. See live roles on the GroYouth board.

See live roles →

groyouth.com/job-seeker